Getting to the heart of the matter

Garnett strategy group looks toward third phase of ‘Heart & Soul’ with Jan. 27 meeting

BY DANE HICKS  THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — A community planning organization which has been gathering opinionated data from city residents and others for nearly two years will move toward executing action plans based on its findings over the coming months, with planning a January 27 meeting to start developing the action phase of its project.

“Growing Garnett Heart & Soul” has been an ongoing project since January 2020 when organizer Paula Scott gathered its data and winnowed it into “Heart & Soul statements” that define the city’s wishes and goals. That information came together in a comprehensive series of town meetings and public input sessions by direct input from Garnett residents, business owners and city officials.

The second planning project was a series of three town meetings, resulting in a meeting of the City’s Heart & Soul project leaders, which later evolved into the city-county-funded Anderson County Development Agency.

Commissioners hold to course press for board on more action

BY DANE HICKS  THE ANDERSON COUNTY REVIEW

GARNETT — City commission officials pushed toward Tuesday night with two new appointments to the Garnett Housing Authority Board they will press for a more proactive approach toward developing housing opportunities in the city, primarily in response later in the week that it’s existing debt of more than $300,000 had been retired, and a request for a list for units at either the two complexes that would be available for units at the private pay Park Place apartment buildings or at the units at the private pay Park Place apartment buildings. North did not necessarily sign- off on a project because sometimes it means to mean that the project will mean that it may not be approved when they actually become a reality.

Commissioner Jody Cole reiterated statements earlier this month that Kansas is one of the worst states for retirees, and “Tax-Friendly States for Retirees”, and finds Kansas to be the sixth-worst for mid- level families and retirees.

My “Thank-Yous” for 2022

Here we go, into a new year, and it’s time for me to thank so many for helping me enjoy the past year in my hobby of archaising.
As I’ve said every year my first “Thank-You” never change. No.1 - My Lord and Savior Jesus Christ especially for my health and restoration.
No.2 - My beautiful bride Kay, for being there for me and helping me to write my weekly columns.
No.3  - For Dane Hicks and his wonderful staff for allowing me and helping me to write my weekly columns.

The following people have helped me in so many different ways this past year involving my hobby. These thank you’s are in no specific order what so ever. Some of you are local, others are from our great state of Kansas and even a few are from another state.

I deeply apologize for the misspelling of names and also to those I’ve left out.
My God Bless each and every one of you who I have mentioned and all the readers of my columns each and every day of the New Year 2022.

Respectfully submitted by Henry Roekers, 26202W2

HISTORY

10 years ago...

A proposal to reduce program savings and wheat and feed grains surplus will likely be discussed at the next Congressional session. Still, local agency leaders believe that the program needs a better explanation before local farmers can determine if the program benefits are worth the reductions. The program –“payment in kind” – that would give farmers grains commoditization for taking land out of production. According to a news release from Bob Dole, R-Kan, the original proposal was not passed by the fifth Congress. The statement included that the program was “sutely needed to reduce excessive stocks and lay the groundwork for how income and income assistance programs will be restructured in the future.” The proposal is being offered for the southeast of Harris the Kansas Department of Transportation. The proposal for the public will be offered on Thursday to review the proposal's economic, social, and environmental effects and the route's design.

30 years ago...

Anderson County Commission made no move towards a decision on landless rates. New information may aid a proposal to change less than previously anticipated if the formula based on monthly or annualized method of landless. The commission thought residents would pay $1.50 per year for damaging their rent at the Landfill beginning January 1, 1993, due to state mandate. When the information was received on order, it was decided to charge less money could be used to fix up the amount of money the county would owe. (785) 433-1898

Kansas net farm income holding steady in ’22, but next year could be tougher

By Pat Moloney, K-State Research andMANHATTAN, Kan.  A Kansas StateUniversity economist says farm income in Kansas has remained “pretty good” despite the rise of cost of doing business.

“Looking at the Kansas farm economy, we’ve had some challenges in the last couple of years,” said Professor Craig Chadwick, head of the Department of Agricultural Economics. “The pandemic, continued high input prices, and the extreme weather conditions have all contributed to the recent challenges. However, overall, farm income has remained relatively stable.”

Chadwick noted that while the Kansas farm economy has faced challenges, it has also experienced some positive developments.

“The pandemic has highlighted the importance of local food systems, which has led to an increase in demand for locally produced food,” said Chadwick. “This has led to better prices for farmers and increased sales for local food businesses.”

Chadwick also expects that the continued high input prices will continue to affect the Kansas farm economy in the coming years.

“The high input prices will continue to put pressure on farmers, but I do think we will see some improvements in the future,” said Chadwick. “We are starting to see some signs of improvement in the commodity market, which will help to offset some of the challenges faced by farmers.”
